INVITATION

India is supporting 18% of the human and about 11% of livestock's population on just 2.4% land and 4.2% of water resources of the world. Country needs to produce about 5–6 million tonnes additional food grains every year along with proportional increase in oilseeds, fibres, sugar, vegetables, fruits and livestock's products to meet the requirement of the burgeoning population. At the same time, Indian agriculture is facing second generation problems such as decline in ground water table, factor productivity, benefit: cost ratio, soil health, use of organic sources of nutrients, land holding per capita, and deterioration of natural resources. These issues are threatening the food, water, nutritional, health and environmental security in future.

Past strategy for development of the agriculture sector in India has focused primarily on raising agricultural output and improving food security. This strategy involved (a) an increase in productivity through better technology and varieties and increased use of quality seed, fertiliser, irrigation and agro-chemicals; (b) incentive structure in the form of remunerative prices for some crops and subsidies on farm inputs; (c) public investments in agriculture; and (d) facilitating institutions. The strategy paid dividends as the country was able to address severe food shortage that emerged during mid-1960s. During the last half a Century (1965 to 2015), since the adoption of green revolution, India's food production multiplied 3.7 times while the population multiplied by 2.5 times. The net result has been a 45% increase in per person food production, which has made India not only food self-sufficient at aggregate level, but also a net food exporting country.

The strategy did not explicitly recognize the need to raise farmers' income and did not mention any direct measure to promote farmers' welfare. The experience shows that in some cases, growth in output brings similar increase in farmers' income but in many cases farmers' income did not grow much with increase in output. The net result has been that farmers' income remained low, which is evident from the incidence of poverty among farm households. The NSSO data on Consumption Expenditure Survey for year 2011–12 reveals that more than one fifth of rural households with self-employment in agriculture as their principal occupation' were having income less than the poverty line. The proportion of farm households suffering from poverty was quite high in some states. The highest incidence was observed in Jharkhand where 45.3% of farm households, the lowest in Punjab where 0.5% farm households were under poverty and at National level 22.5%.

Farmers' income also remained low in relation to income of those working in the non-farm sector. During early 1980s, farm income per cultivator was just 34% of income of a non-agriculture worker. This disparity was quite large and required a policy response to raise farmers' income at a faster rate. After 1993–94, relative income of farmers worsened and reached one-fourth of income of non-agricultural workers. There was some improvement during 2004–05 to 2011–12, but no change over the 1983–84 level. The past four years (2012–13 to 2015–16) again witnessed deterioration in relative income of farmers.

The low and highly fluctuating farm income is causing detrimental effect on the interest in farming and farm investments, and is also forcing more and more cultivators, particularly younger age group, to leave farming. This can cause serious adverse effect on the future of agriculture in the country.

Realising the need to pay special attention to the plight of farmers the Central Government changed the name of Ministry of Agriculture to Ministry of Agriculture and Farmers Welfare in 2015. It is apparent that income earned by a farmer from agriculture is crucial to address agrarian distress and promote farmers welfare. In this background, the goal set by the Hon'ble Prime Minister Shri Narendra Modi to double farmers' income by 2022-23 is central to promote farmers' welfare, reduce agrarian distress and bring parity between income of farmers and those working in non-agricultural professions.

Doubling real income of farmers till 2022-23 over the base year of 2015-16, requires annual growth of 10.4% in farmers' income. This implies that the on-going and previously achieved rate of growth in farm income has to be sharply accelerated. Therefore, strong measures will be needed to harness all possible sources of growth in farmers' income within as well as outside agriculture sector. The major sources of growth operating within agriculture sector related to "Doubling Farmers' Income" are:

- Improvement in productivity,
- Reduction in cost of cultivation,
- Increase in cropping intensity,
- Diversification towards high value crops,
- Increase in production of livestock, and
- Improved price realisation by farmers

The proposed symposium on "Doubling Farmers' Income Through Agronomic Interventions Under Changing Scenario" will provide platform for interaction among the scientists, industrialists, policy makers, research scholars and farmers, working on various aspects of Doubling Farmers' Income and will come out with concrete recommendations for solving the emerging challenges of Indian Agriculture.

We consider it our privileges to extend you a warm invitation for your active participation in the XXI Biennial National Symposium to accomplish its objectives. Looking forward to meet you in the XXI Biennial National Symposium of ISA at Udaipur.

Prof. Trilochan Mohapatra
Secretary (DARE) & Director General (ICAR)
Krishi Bhavan, New Delhi

Dr A.K. Vyas
President, Indian Society of Agronomy
and ADG (HRM), ICAR, KAB II, New Delhi
